Tomomi Okuda, Deltapath Country Manager

"We are excited to build our relationship with SYNNEX in the Japan market. With SYNNEX' coverage and expertise, we will be able to deliver our solutions from the cloud as well as on premise to hospitals and nursing homes. We are proud our solution has proven to be a great success at Gunma University Hospital and we look forward to working with SYNNEX to further extend our solutions to the healthcare industry in Japan."

The Future of Telecommunications in the Healthcare Industry

Masaki Kamiyama, VP of Product Management Dept, SYNNEX Infotec Corporation, stated: "Due to the declining birthrate and aging population in our country, the working population is continuously dropping. After learning about the use cases at several hospitals using Deltapath's Acute, we see a huge advantage leveraging this technology industry wide to improve patient care as well as working conditions for healthcare professionals. By deploying the latest ICT solution, it is possible to reduce staff workload, which enables them to spend more quality time on patient care. Ultimately, we aim to improve the overall service quality and accuracy of the healthcare industry. At the same time, this vision also echoes with the "Workstyle Innovation" scheme launched by the government."

Innovating The Way Health Care Institutions Communicate

frSIP Acute® is the new standard of hospital communication system in Japanese public hospital. It is fully integrated with popular nurse call systems, hospital information system, and panic value alert system. With Deltapath's Acute solution, nurses can instantly alert doctors of a patient emergency along with patient's location and medical history. The responding doctor can then provide instant first aid guidance to the nurse while the doctor runs to the ward. frSIP Acute encourages flow of information and is the conversation-oriented solution that we've been looking for. The solution not only improved our means of communication, but also the quality of patient care.
